It's essential to focus on what you control, especially when life feels difficult. This mindset is often overshadowed by the flood of information we consume daily. For instance, I spent 30 minutes this morning going down a rabbit hole after reading about Bitcoin. I ended up lost in unrelated Wikipedia pages.

Stoicism teaches us that time is our most valuable resource. While it's nice to know many things, most of the information we consume has little real value. We waste time on trivial pursuits, like reading negative news, stalking social media profiles, or watching shows just to "kill time." Why kill something so precious?

We're quick to get upset by things we can't control. Responding to every little thing we encounter is a habit. But true happiness comes from accepting that we don't control most things. Worrying about global issues like recessions, wars, or natural disasters is unproductive. Indifference to things outside our control is the key to happiness.

Happiness comes from meaningful activities: good friendships, enjoyable work, reading thought-provoking books, walking in nature, working out, or watching a great movie. For example, a recent Saturday was fulfilling because I spent time reading, writing, walking, and enjoying meals with family.

Contrast that with another day when I got caught up in negative conversations about COVID. The negativity drained me, and I accomplished nothing useful. Things are the way they are. The best we can do is focus on what matters and how we spend our time.

1. Select the activity that contributes to happiness from the options given below:

- (1) Watching random TV shows
- (2) Arguing on social media
- (3) Reading thought-provoking books
- (4) Browsing the internet for news

Ans. Option (3) is Correct

Explanation: The passage emphasises that meaningful activities like reading thought-provoking books contribute to true happiness, unlike passive or negative habits such as watching random TV shows, arguing online or aimless browsing.

2. Select the central idea of the passage from the options given below:

1. Consuming more information leads to happiness..
2. Responding to global issues is essential.
3. Happiness comes from following current events.
4. Time is a valuable resource we should use it wisely.

Ans. Option (4) is Correct

Explanation: The central idea of the passage is that time is precious and should be spent on meaningful activities within our control, rather than wasting it on unproductive or negative distractions.

3. Choose the best option to complete the sentence:

Practicing indifference to uncontrollable things helps to achieve_____

- (1) Better focus on global events
- (2) Fulfilling and lasting happiness
- (3) Improved emotional reactivity
- (4) A deeper knowledge of issues

Ans. Option (2) is Correct

Explanation: The passage states that "Indifference to things outside our control is the key to happiness." This means letting go of uncontrollable worries leads to a more fulfilling and lasting sense of happiness.

4. Choose an example of wasting time based on the passage from the options given below:-

- (1) Scrolling social media profiles
- (2) Walking in nature
- (3) Spending time with family
- (4) Writing and reflecting

Ans. Option (1) is Correct

Explanation: The passage lists “stalking social media profiles” as an example of wasting time on trivial pursuits, unlike meaningful activities like walking in nature, spending time with family or writing and reflecting.

Read the given passage and answer the four questions that follow.

In the ancient city of Varanasi, Arjun found his world transformed one monsoon afternoon. Born into a family of hardworking labourers, he was expected to follow in his father’s footsteps. Yet, Arjun harboured an unspoken passion for art that no one knew about. As dark clouds gathered and the first raindrops fell, he wandered through the narrow lanes of the old city, seeking solace from the predictable rhythms of life.

That day, as he took refuge under a vibrant awning in a bustling market, Arjun encountered an old painter named Raghav. With paint-splattered hands and eyes that shimmered with decades of experience, Raghav noticed the spark in Arjun’s eyes. He invited Arjun into his humble studio, where canvases whispered stories of love, loss, and hope. Inspired by Raghav’s gentle mentorship, Arjun discovered his own unique style, blending tradition with innovation.

Over time, his artwork became a mirror reflecting the emotions of the city, and his reputation grew. Arjun’s journey from a reluctant son to an emerging artist was not without hardship. Yet, every challenge became a brushstroke in the masterpiece of his life. Eventually, his creations graced galleries beyond Varanasi, uniting cultures and hearts. In every piece, Arjun celebrated the resilience of the human spirit, proving that passion and perseverance can transform even the most ordinary life into a vibrant work of art.

His journey, filled with unexpected lessons and creative breakthroughs, taught him that every struggle offered a chance to begin anew, inspiring his art with hope and transformation.

Ans. Option (4) is Correct

Explanation: The passage centres on Arjun’s journey of self-discovery through art, sparked by a chance meeting with the mentor Raghav. It highlights how mentorship and the courage to pursue one’s hidden passion can lead to personal transformation, even amidst adversity.

6. Evaluate the impact of Arjun’s artwork as described in the passage:-

- (1) His art remained confined within the narrow lanes of Varanasi with little recognition.
- (2) His work was mostly criticised and led to further isolation from society, leading to sorrow and dejection.
- (3) His creations resonated deeply, uniting diverse cultures and inspiring many people.
- (4) His art was solely a personal hobby that never gained public attention though it gave him a lot of satisfaction.

Ans. Option (3) is Correct

Explanation: The passage clearly states that Arjun’s artwork “graced galleries beyond Varanasi, uniting cultures and hearts.” This shows that his art had a significant impact, going beyond personal fulfilment to inspire and connect people from different backgrounds.

7. Deduce the message the author conveys about overcoming obstacles:-

- (1) Struggles are insurmountable barriers that only worsen one’s chances of success.
- (2) Every challenge offers an opportunity to grow and transform one’s life with resilience.
- (3) Only those with privileged backgrounds can successfully overcome life’s obstacles.
- (4) Obstacles invariably lead to failure, regardless of personal determination or passion.

Ans. Option (2) is Correct

Explanation: The passage emphasises that Arjun’s hardships became “brushstrokes in the masterpiece of his life” and that “every struggle offered a chance to begin anew.” This clearly conveys the message that resilience and passion can transform challenges into opportunities for personal growth and success.

8. Interpret the change in Arjun’s outlook on life throughout the passage:-

- (1) He learned to view every hardship as an essential brushstroke in his personal masterpiece.
- (2) He became indifferent to challenges and avoided confronting any obstacles whatsoever.
- (3) He rejected the essential idea of change and chose to adhere strictly to his old beliefs.
- (4) He focused solely on attaining commercial success, disregarding personal growth and art.

Ans. Option (1) is Correct

Explanation: The passage describes how Arjun's challenges shaped his journey and became integral to his growth as an artist and person. The line "every challenge became a brushstroke in the masterpiece of his life" directly supports this interpretation, showing his transformed and positive outlook on life through resilience and creativity.
